TEMPLE NAMES

Temple Names searches your pedigree on familysearch.org to find people who have enough information to go to the temple. This lets you quickly identify family names that you can take to the temple and fill in the gaps in your family ordinance work.

Temple Names can also identify people who are close to having enough information. These are the low-hanging fruit in your pedigree.

Temple Names looks in your direct line, and at individuals in your descendancy lines. Descendancy lines are people not in your direct line, but are still related to you. For example: your father is in your direct line. His siblings are in your descendancy line. More information about descendancy research is here: https://familysearch.org/learningcenter/lesson/easy-steps-todescendancy-research/877

Temple Names only works on Windows. If you use a Mac then you are out of luck.
